About AMCOMP

The American Society of Workers Comp Professionals, Inc., (AMCOMP) is a not-for-profit Corporation dedicated to professional excellence in the field of workers compensation. AMCOMP was established due to the lack of a professional society that recognized or certified the highly specialized field of workers compensation. AMCOMP was formed to certify workers compensation professionals and to raise the professional standards of practice in the field.

To help ensure appropriate representation and viewpoints in the field of workers compensation, the Board of Directors includes leading distinguished professionals. The AMCOMP Board of Directors acts as an insurance information resource for issues that arise and affect the field of workers compensation.

AMCOMP's Principal Objectives

- ★ 1. To maintain the integrity and degree of excellence in the field of workers compensation by providing a professional designation (upon fulfillment of various criteria, including successful completion of a core curriculum) that will serve as an industry standard;
- ★ 2. To further the education of all workers comp professionals by providing relevant courses in the workers compensation field of study and in related disciplines;
- ★ 3. To maintain a current understanding of emerging trends and issues in the workplace and how they relate to the field of workers compensation by means of newsletters, annual meetings, monographs/digests, conferences and/or relevant seminars; and
- ★ 4. To further ethical standards in the field of workers compensation by establishing uniform guidelines and principles.

What is a WCP?

AMCOMP's education program, certified Workers Compensation Professional (WCP) was developed to help raise the professional standards in the field of workers compensation. Each of us is able to detail the need to improve the industry in our own business histories, almost always concluding that a common body of knowledge and measurement would benefit all participants in the field: insurers, reinsurers, insureds, self-insureds, regulators, agents, brokers and most importantly, claimants. The AMCOMP certification program is intended to develop a basic foundation of knowledge of the various aspects of the industry so that individuals who have completed the program will have a better understanding and appreciation of how the various pieces (e.g. claims, risk management, pricing, etc.) work together in order to make the greater whole.
